Many college students dismiss talk of a draft

By Stephanie Cordes

CHICAGO — Many college students see the latest flirtation with a military draft more as a political ploy — and some, as an actual possibility — than as a serious game-plan like a real surge or a more profound attempt to ground the war against terrorism.

They welcome a discussion of the mechanics of the draft, but they don’t think it will come to pass, or that popular support will build for it. They say they don’t see the latest draft proposal as a way to get at the root of the problem.

But they do think it would be useful to talk about the draft as an option, and a call for a debate over it, and a call to discuss the issue of military service.

They also think it would be useful to talk about the draft as a way to get at the root of the problem.
